DANR's Proposed Maps for New York State Senate Districts 31st & 33rd

This DANR proposal is based on the New York State's 2010 population of 19,378,102 people, as reported by the 2010 U.S. Census Bureau. Considering this population and that the number of senate districts will remain at 62, the average size for each NYS senate district would be 312,550 people. In the State of New York, each senate district is required to be at least 5% plus or 5% minus of the average size population. Districts with too many or too few people will have to be adjusted or combined with other districts to be within +/- 5% in order to meet target average size.

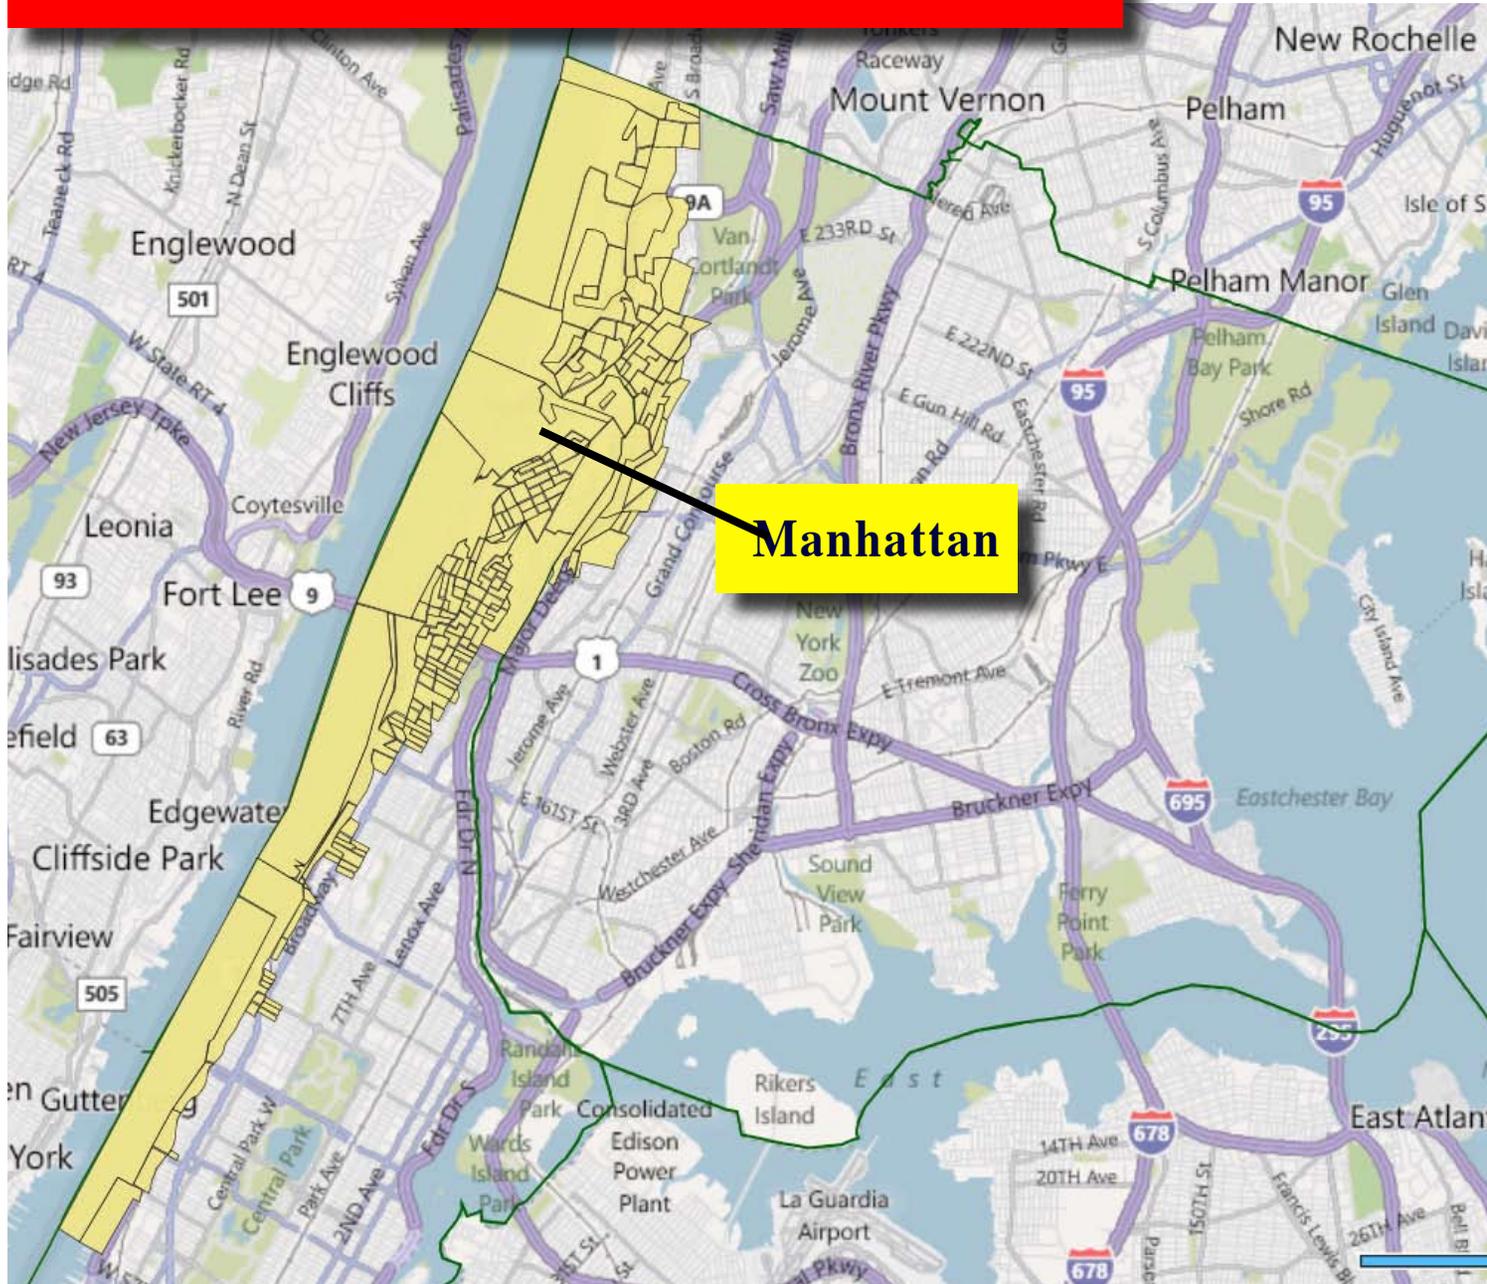

Under this scenario senate districts maximum size would be 328,178 people, which is equivalent to average size of 312,550 plus 5%.

Senate districts minimum size would be 296,923, which is equivalent to average size of 312,550 minus 5%.

Intended average size per senate district may change due to other factors, including prison population and other considerations.

In 2000, the average size of New York state senate districts was 306,072 people.

ABOUT DANR REDISTRICTING PROJECT

The Dominican American National Roundtable's Redistricting Project (DA-R) is a national initiative seeking to engage and educate Dominican, Latino and minority communities in the United States in the Redistricting-Appropriation Process with the objective of achieving adequate representation – “one person-one vote” and to guarantee a fair and just re-districting process.

ABOUT DANR

The Dominican-American National Roundtable (DANR) is a non-partisan, non-profit corporation seeking to bring together the different voices of all people of Dominican origin in the United States.

DANR is a national forum for analysis, planning, and action to advance the educational, economic, legal, social, cultural, and political interests of Dominican Americans. It aims to ensure for U. S. Dominicans the full exercise of the rights and freedoms guaranteed in the Constitution of the United States of America.

With those objectives in mind, DANR is committed to enriching the quality of life in the United States by highlighting the contributions and aspiration of Dominicans to the larger American society.
